

T & Z Deli

My website will focus on a fictional New Jersey style Italian deli. The website will essentially be formatted to look like a restaurant website and feature options like online ordering and catering. The deli will feature Italian cuisine and cuts of meat as well as Italian American dishes (like Italian hero sandwiches and chicken cutlet subs). The menu will probably be divided into sandwich styles from major regions in Italy and also have a section for meat and the weight and cuts they can come as. The deli will also sell drinks and snacks. The deli will proudly name fictional vendors like farms and companies where they get all their ingredients from. I imagine the owners are a married couple with Italian heritage that would be explained in some part of the website.

This website will store data about menu items (sandwiches, chips, drinks, meat, etc.), specifically name and price, and users/guest users will be able to add menu items to online orders. There will be a “bag” that holds all added menu items to a single order and totals the order. Orders will be held under the name that users provide. Only administrators will be able to add, edit or delete menu items, so a login page will be needed for the owners to adjust prices and change the menu. Similarly, catering orders will hold a list of bulk menu items and their prices (like 20-50 sandwiches, a box of chips, a cart of drinks, etc.) and hold added items to the “bag.” Catering orders will be held under a given name and an address will be attached so they can be delivered to the event. Finally, the careers page will have an application form for management to view job applications (completed as a digital form).
